

AJ Bell Adventurous Ready-made portfolio half-yearly update

As of 31/12/2022

Commentary

Over the second half of 2022, the Adventurous portfolio delivered a positive return of 2.3%, bringing its cumulative return since its inception on 12 December 2018 to 24.0%.

The NinetyOne UK Alpha fund was a strong performer in the second half of 2022, delivering a return of 3.1% – marginally trailing the FTSE All Share index. This index benefited from its underlying meaningful exposure towards ‘value’ commodity-related stocks, representing companies with high earnings compared to their share price (low P/E ratios). These companies performed strongly in 2022, following years of poor returns relative to their ‘growth’ peers.

Market volatility persisted through the second half of 2022. Globally, central banks hiked interest rates further, as inflation proved to be stickier than anticipated. A war in Europe continued to have a significant impact, and recessions are expected in most developed markets. In the UK, uncertainty was exacerbated by September’s ‘mini-budget’ and the resulting LDI crisis that forced the Bank of England into purchasing long-dated gilts – to break the downward price spiral and re-establish an orderly market.

Bond markets ended H2 2022 broadly lower in sterling terms, with high yield the exception, posting mid-single-digit gains. Amid this backdrop, the Artemis Strategic Bond fund within the portfolio’s fixed income allocation ended the period broadly flat, albeit ahead of the IA £ Strategic Bond sector (-0.7%).

Despite initially negative returns in the third quarter of 2022, bond markets were broadly lower in sterling terms (high yield being the exception) over H2 2022. Meanwhile, global shares ended the period broadly higher thanks to an easing of inflationary pressures in the US, leading investors to anticipate a potential slowdown in the pace of monetary policy tightening by the Federal Reserve. The strongest performer in the portfolio was the abrdn Global Smaller Companies fund, up 4.1%, which clawed back some of its losses earlier in the year. This return was ahead of the IA Global sector, but behind the small cap index. Elsewhere within shares exposure, Fidelity Global Special Situations gained 2.7%, slightly behind the MSCI ACWI index (3.3%) and the IA Global sector (4.0%).

Some respite was found in the portfolio’s allocation to alternatives, an asset class that tends to benefit from being uncorrelated to traditional equity and bond markets. The Janus Henderson Absolute Return fund was able to withstand some of the volatility, achieving positive returns of 2.9% over the period.

The Investments Team here at AJ Bell haven’t made any suggested changes to the Ready-made Adventurous portfolio during H2.

Portfolio rating

The risk rating of the portfolio depends on the type of assets it invests in. Bonds are more conservative because they offer a more certain (though typically lower) return. Shares are more aggressive because they offer a less certain (though typically higher) return.

Keep in mind this applies over the longer term: five years or more.
