

AJ Bell Income Ready-made portfolio half-yearly update

As of 31/12/2021

Commentary

Over the second half of 2021, the Income portfolio delivered a positive return of 5.1%, making an overall return of 25.0% since its inception on 12 December 2018. Across this half-year, the strongest performer was JPM US Equity Income, which delivered 11.2% over the period – broadly in line with the wider US market.

As inflation started to bite, investors increasingly expected interest rates to rise. Sure enough, some central banks took action towards the end of 2021, with the Bank of England one of the first to move, raising the UK base rate from 0.10% to 0.25% – the first rise since before the COVID-19 pandemic. This prevailing economic environment was anathema to bonds, which suffer price drops when higher interest rates become available to lenders.

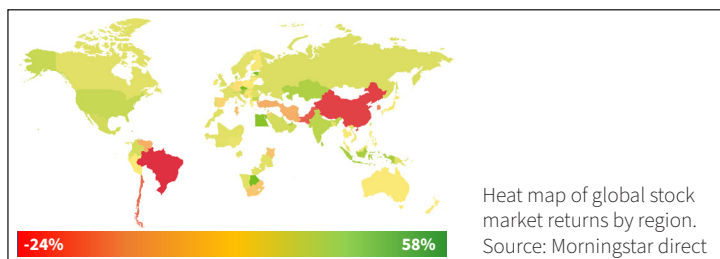

It was strong share markets in developed countries that led the way in the second half of 2021. The US in particular performed strongly, with the S&P 500 up 13%, and nearly 30% across the whole of 2021. Conversely, many emerging market countries struggled – most notably China, where shares were weakened by uncertainty around government intervention in the country's stock market. India, however, had opposite fortunes. The country's main stock index was up 14.6% in the last six months and returned 27.4% over the year.

Elsewhere, Japanese stocks struggled, enduring a volatile six months. In Q3 2021, its index was up 7.1%, before giving up most of its gains during Q4 2021. The consistent factor was a weakening yen, which is a headwind for domestic investors because it means share prices are worth less when converted back into pound sterling.

Despite uncertainty around inflation, public finances, and the Omicron variant of COVID-19, investors appeared generally optimistic and supported markets in the final months of 2021. The success of the worldwide vaccination program, as well as increased economic activity following the end of lockdowns, contributed to this optimism. Data suggesting that the Omicron variant might not be as dangerous as feared has also helped to ease concerns over a future of living with COVID-19, if the virus is not eliminated completely.

The Investments Team at AJ Bell have made no suggested changes to the portfolio following our annual strategic asset allocation review. We retain strong conviction in the current holdings and the portfolio's ability to navigate uncertain times in the markets during 2022 for Income investors.

Portfolio rating

The risk rating of the portfolio depends on the type of assets it invests in. Bonds are more conservative because they offer a more certain (though typically lower) return. Shares are more aggressive because they offer a less certain (though typically higher) return.

Keep in mind this applies over the longer term: five years or more.
